ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

This document sets out the complete brand strategy for Wasel, a subscription-based ride-hailing platform built for Jordan. It covers brand identity, dual-sided messaging architecture, community growth systems, trust infrastructure, boycott-resilient positioning, loyalty design, competitive analysis, go-to-market timeline, brand investment budget, and KPIs.

The strategy is designed to be scrutinised by investors, regulators, drivers, and riders. Every claim is grounded in Jordan market data, LTRC regulatory context, and documented consumer behaviour. Nothing in this document depends on a political moment lasting. The brand is built to win the decade, not the headline.

01 Executive Summary

Wasel is a subscription-based ride-hailing platform designed specifically for Jordan. Where Uber and Careem take 30% of every fare a driver earns — every ride, every month, forever — Wasel charges a flat monthly fee. The platform earns whether a driver completes 5 rides or 50. The driver keeps the rest.

This is not a feature difference. It is a structural shift in who the platform serves.

The brand strategy in this document is designed to accomplish three things simultaneously: recruit drivers away from commission-extraction, convert riders through value alignment rather than guilt, and build the institutional trust required for corporate adoption and long-term defensibility. The brand must be strong enough to outlive the boycott cycle that catalysed the opportunity, and credible enough to survive regulatory scrutiny, competitive counter-campaigns, and the natural cooling of political emotion.

11,600	JD 175	28+	100%
Licensed vehicles held by Uber & Careem in Jordan (LTRC, 2024)	Average monthly commission extracted per driver at 30% rate	Jordanian universities = 350,000 potential student riders	Jordanian-owned platform — profits reinvested domestically

The brand thesis: Wasel wins not by shouting loudest about being Jordanian, but by being the only platform that structurally earns the right to call itself fair. That distinction is permanent. The boycott is a catalyst. The economics are the argument.

The strategy is built on seven interlocking pillars: a brand core with enduring mission, dual-sided messaging that serves drivers and riders with equal conviction, a central narrative that translates across every channel, a community growth engine that lowers CAC while building belonging, an operational trust framework that retains what the brand attracts, boycott-resilient positioning anchored to structural fairness rather than political sentiment, and loyalty systems that create switching costs on both sides of the marketplace.

02 Market Context — Why Now, Why Jordan

The Extraction Problem

Jordan's ride-hailing market is dominated by two foreign operators with identical business models: charge drivers 30% of every fare. At a blended monthly fare revenue of JD 585 per driver, that is JD 175 extracted monthly, JD 2,100 annually, per driver. Across 11,600 licensed vehicles, the commission economy removes approximately JD 24.4 million from Jordanian driver incomes every year and routes it to overseas shareholders.

This is not an emotional framing. It is the arithmetic of the commission model applied to publicly available market data. Wasel's entire brand proposition begins here — at the numbers, before the story.

The Boycott Catalyst

In September 2025, Uber announced a multi-million dollar investment in Flytrex, an Israeli drone delivery company. The backlash was immediate and documented across Middle East Monitor, the Business & Human Rights Resource Centre, and activist networks in Jordan and across the Arab world. Careem, being 100% Uber-owned since 2020, inherited the same reputational exposure.

Prior to this, the International Alliance of App-Based Transport Workers — representing over 100,000 gig workers across 20 countries — had already issued solidarity pledges in 2024. Consumer boycott hashtags targeting Uber and Careem had gone viral in Saudi Arabia as early as 2021. Jordan's consumer market, one of the most politically engaged in the Arab world, represents a high-readiness environment for platform switching.

> Critical distinction: the boycott created urgency, not the brand. Wasel must be built on the structural unfairness of the commission model — which existed before October 2023 and will exist after the boycott fades. The brand anchors to justice, not outrage.

The Competitive Window

Factor	Current State	Wasel Opportunity
Licensed operators	Only 4 total: Uber, Careem, Petra Ride, Jeeny	Regulatory barrier protects licensed entrants; 44 unlicensed apps being blocked
Market concentration	Uber + Careem hold 11,600 of ~11,600 licensed vehicles	Duopoly is vulnerable to a credible third option with different economics
Careem's brand loss	Careem built on 'local company' perception. That narrative is gone post-Uber acquisition.	The 'local' positioning is entirely unclaimed. Wasel owns it by default.
Driver dissatisfaction	Documented protests over commission rates and licensing fees (Jordan Times, multiple reports)	Driver community is pre-disposed to switch; acquisition cost lower than average
Uber exit signals	Careem exited Pakistan (July 2025) citing 'challenging macroeconomic reality and intensifying competition'	Regional retreat pattern; Jordan is a viable consolidation target for a local champion
LTRC crackdown	Ministry blocked 24+ unlicensed apps in 2024, 44+ by September 2025	Regulatory compliance is a competitive barrier; Wasel's license is a moat

03 Brand Core: Mission, Personality & Tone

Mission

To move Jordan forward — fairly.

Four words. Every element earns its place.

Word	What it carries
"Move"	Transport — the literal service. Also: progress, momentum, agency.
"Jordan"	Specificity, not abstraction. Not 'the region'. Not 'our community'. Jordan, by name.
"Forward"	Direction. Progress. The platform does not just go — it goes somewhere.
"Fairly"	The entire moral contract. Fair for drivers. Fair for riders. Fair pricing. Fair earnings. One word holds the whole brief.

This mission does not reference boycotts, foreign companies, commissions, or political events. It will be just as true in 2035. It survives every news cycle by being grounded in a condition — fairness — that will always need defending.

Brand Personality — The Human Archetype

Imagine a specific type of Jordanian man. Not the flashy one. The one who fixed your car and wouldn't take money for it. The one who drives a decent car, knows everyone in the neighbourhood, and doesn't need to announce he's trustworthy — it shows. He says "هاد حقك" (this is your right) before you ask for it. He has pride but not arrogance. Capability without performance.

Trait	What it means in practice	What it rules out
Honest	Shares real numbers. Says the hard thing clearly. Never over-promises.	Vague language, inflated claims, corporate euphemisms
Grounded	Understands how Jordan actually works — economically, socially, culturally.	Aspirational Western brand language that doesn't land in Amman
Dependable	Shows up. Every time. If something goes wrong, it is acknowledged and fixed.	Excuses, deflection, customer service theatre
Quietly proud	Confident without being loud. "هاد بلدنا" — this is ours — said once, calmly.	Flag-waving, chest-thumping, performative nationalism
Warm	Genuinely cares about people. Treats drivers as professionals. Treats riders as adults.	Corporate 'partner' language, patronising safety messaging, hollow inclusivity

Tone of Voice

Wasel speaks Jordanian vernacular — not Gulf Arabic, not formal MSA. Uses احنا (us) not نحن. Direct statements, not marketing fluff. Real numbers. Short sentences that land. Dry humour, used sparingly and well.

Register	Principle	Example
Emotional	Low-key ownership. “This is ours” energy, not “long live Jordan” energy.	“Your city. Your app.” — not “Proud to serve the great Jordanian people”
Rational	Proof over promise. Show the math, then make the claim.	“JD 175 a month stays with you, not with a shareholder in San Francisco.”
Social/Community	Conversational, first-person plural, self-aware. A friend, not a brand.	“احنا واصلين. انت كمان.” — We connect. You drive.
Corporate/B2B	Measured, precise, evidence-backed. The same values, a different register.	Fairness Report, income documentation, LTRC compliance records

04 Dual-Sided Messaging Architecture

Wasel is a two-sided marketplace. Both sides must be addressed with equal precision — but with distinct emotional logic. The messages must reinforce each other without requiring either side to know they are part of a strategy.

For Drivers — The Central Emotional Truth

"For the first time, your work comes back to you."

The indignity of the commission model is not primarily financial — it is moral. In Jordanian culture, a man's labour is his dignity. Taking 30% of a man's work every single day, with no ceiling and no reciprocity, is a moral offence that the market has normalised. Wasel names this — not by shouting, but by offering the alternative and letting the arithmetic speak.

Message Layer	Core Message	How to Deliver It
Emotional — Dignity	You were always worth more than 70%.	Driver Stories: real drivers, real income numbers, before and after. No scripts. No brand overlays.
Rational — Income	JD 175/month in commission stays with you. Over 5 years, that is JD 10,500.	Income comparison on every driver acquisition touchpoint — landing page, onboarding, referral material.
Community — Advocacy	Wasel is lobbying LTRC to cut the driver permit fee from JD 400 to JD 200. We are in the building on your behalf.	Monthly regulatory update to driver community WhatsApp. Wasel named as advocate in any public LTRC communication.
Structural — Identity	You are not a driver on someone else's platform. You are Wasel.	Driver rating is public, portable, and grows. Referral bonuses build community. Annual Driver Summit creates belonging.

Never use the word "partner" for drivers. It is corporate lip service and Jordanian drivers detect it immediately. Instead: they are Wasel. The platform's reputation is their reputation. That is a more honest and more powerful relationship than any corporate partnership language.

For Riders — The Central Emotional Truth

"When you ride with Wasel, you go somewhere and take someone with you."

Most Jordanian riders will not boycott Uber out of conviction alone — they will switch if switching feels smart, easy, and aligned with who they want to be. Guilt is not a loyalty engine. Pride is. The rider's choice should feel like the intelligent option that also happens to be the decent one.

Message Layer	Core Message	How to Deliver It
Rational — Price	Fair, transparent, and 5% cheaper than Uber/Careem. What you see is what you pay. Always.	Pricing shown before booking confirmation. No surge for subscribers. Side-by-side fare comparison in acquisition ads.
Emotional — Pride	Your ride supports a Jordanian family, not a Silicon Valley shareholder.	One-line rider app copy. Shown after booking: "Your driver earned [X] tonight."
Service — Quality	A driver earning fairly drives better. The link between driver income and rider experience is explicit.	Driver rating display in app. Earnings disclosed monthly in Fairness Report. Service quality tied to driver satisfaction narrative.
Community — Belonging	Wasel users understand how Jordan works and what makes it better.	University community events, corporate account culture, Wasel streak visible in app.

The two narratives converge at the brand level: fairness creates better outcomes for everyone. Drivers earn more → they are more motivated → service quality rises → riders prefer the platform → more rides → drivers earn more. This loop is the brand's core mental model. It should be shown — in visual form, in the annual report, in every investor deck — until it becomes instinctive.

05 Central Brand Narrative

The Fair Ride

Every enduring brand has a story that does not require the brand to tell it. Here is Wasel's:

The condition	Two foreign companies have moved millions of Jordanians for a decade. They took 30% of every trip. Their profits left Jordan every quarter. The drivers who built their empires earned less and less. The riders who funded their growth got nothing back.
The moral claim	This was never the deal Jordanians would have chosen. It was the deal they were given because there was no alternative.
The turn	Now there is one.
The resolution	Wasel. Flat fee. Full earnings. 100% Jordanian. The fair ride.

> One-sentence version for all materials: "We exist to make mobility fair for every Jordanian — the one who drives, and the one who rides."

Why This Narrative Creates Loyalty, Not Just Usage

Mechanism	Explanation
It gives people a story about themselves	A driver who uses Wasel is not just using an app. A rider who uses Wasel has a simple, honest answer when asked why. That story travels through families, neighbourhoods, and WhatsApp groups without a marketing budget.
It does not depend on the boycott	The narrative is anchored to the commission model's structural unfairness — which predates October 2023 and will persist after political temperatures normalise.
It scales without contradiction	The same story works in a 30-second video, a driver onboarding speech, an investor pitch, an LTRC regulatory submission, and an app store description.
It positions competitors without naming them	The commission economy is the villain. Uber and Careem are never mentioned. They are indicted by the arithmetic.

06 Community-Led Growth Engine

Community-led acquisition is not a marketing tactic. It is the structural alternative to a CAC model that would otherwise require continuous paid spend to sustain. The goal is to build referral loops on both sides of the marketplace that reduce acquisition cost over time while increasing trust.

Wasel Campus — University Ambassador Programme

Component	Detail	Metric Target
Coverage	28 accredited Jordanian universities, ~350,000 students. Starting with Amman's top 8 by enrolment.	Year 1: 8 campuses; Year 2: 20 campuses
Ambassador structure	2 paid ambassadors per campus: one for rider community, one for driver recruitment in surrounding area.	JD 150/month per ambassador + performance bonus
Student onboarding	Free Wasel Go tier (3 months) with verified university email. No payment required to activate.	40% activation rate target within 60 days of enrolment
Campus presence	Student union partnerships, orientation week presence, exam-season transport campaigns, cafeteria Wasel point-of-sale QR.	100% visibility during exam periods at target campuses
Emotional impact	Students who adopt Wasel in Year 1 build a 4-year habit. Habitual users become ambassadors without being asked.	LTV of student rider: 4 years minimum vs. 1.5 years average
Rational impact	University partnerships reduce digital CAC by an estimated 30-40% vs. paid social for this demographic.	Target rider CAC of JD 3.00 via campus vs. JD 8.00 via digital

Driver Storytelling as Brand Media

The most powerful marketing content Wasel has is what its drivers will say when asked about their income before and after. This must be captured, produced, and distributed without the fingerprints of a marketing department.

- "Wasel Driver Stories" — weekly 90-second video series. Real driver, real numbers, real family context. Shot on a phone. No scripts. No brand overlays. Distributed via WhatsApp driver communities first, then Facebook, Instagram Reels, TikTok.
- Authenticity is detected immediately in Jordanian culture and rewarded with trust. A real driver saying "before I paid 30% commission, now I pay JD 20 flat" is evidence. A polished corporate video saying the same thing is advertising.
- Each story becomes earned media that costs the equivalent of a driver's lunch. The stories that resonate get modest paid amplification. The ones that go viral were never planned — they were simply true.

Corporate & Institutional Partnerships

Corporate Wasel Pass accounts represent guaranteed daily trip demand, invoice billing, and institutional switching costs that have nothing to do with loyalty or politics. Once a company's finance team processes Wasel invoices monthly, individual employees stop making switching decisions.

Target Sector	Rationale	Year 1 Target
Hospitals & healthcare	Nurses and doctors on rotating shifts need sub-4-minute reliable transport. No surge tolerance.	5 hospital accounts, 200+ employee enrolments

Target Sector	Rationale	Year 1 Target
Media & broadcasting	Al Mamlaka TV, Ro'ya, and Jordan Radio — shift workers, late-night transport needs, brand alignment with local media.	3 media accounts
Banking & finance	Formal sector, expense-policy-compliant, invoice-billing preference, high ridership frequency.	8 banking/financial institution accounts
International NGOs & UN agencies	Compliance-driven, transport budget holders, require documented and licensed operators.	10 agency accounts; potentially highest ARPU

Neighbourhood & Event Presence

Wasel should be present in Jordanian life at the neighbourhood level, not the stadium level. Small, real sponsorships: local futsal leagues, university graduations, Ramadan Iftar coordination for workers, school-run coordination in residential areas. The brand metric is not reach — it is recognition. "Wasel was there when we needed them." Said person to person, that sentence is worth more than any billboard on the Fifth Circle.

07 Trust & Operational Signalling Framework

Nationalism acquires the first download. Trust acquires the second ride, the tenth, and the hundredth. Four operational signals constitute the brand's trust infrastructure. They are not features — they are non-negotiable standards.

Pillar	Standard	Brand Impact	What Failure Costs
Predictability	Price shown = price paid. Always. No surge for subscribers. No end-of-trip surprises.	Word-of-mouth driver: "Wasel is honest." Repeated with conviction.	One broken promise = "Wasel lied." No amount of brand spend repairs it.
Safety	Verified drivers, live share via WhatsApp (not bespoke), visible SOS from ride start, credentials visible in app.	Corporate adoption, female ridership, family endorsement — the highest-trust segments.	Single safety incident without transparent response collapses institutional trust.
Reliability	Sub-4-minute pickup in core Amman zones from Month 1. Every promise kept or compensated.	"Wasel comes fast." In a city where reliability is rare, this becomes the referral trigger.	Consistent 8-minute pickups = the platform is no different from what came before.
Transparency	Monthly public Fairness Report: driver earnings, platform earnings, reinvestment in Jordan.	Shared by believers as evidence they were right. No competitor can copy without self-indicting.	If numbers are massaged, it is detected. The Fairness Report turns against the brand.

The Monthly Fairness Report

Every month, Wasel publishes a one-page public document: total rides completed, total driver earnings on the platform, how much Wasel earned, what was reinvested in Jordan (salaries, vendor payments, technology), and one driver story with real income numbers. The document is available on the website, shared in driver communities, and distributed to corporate clients as evidence of platform health.

No competitor can match this because their numbers would indict them. The Fairness Report transforms Wasel's transparency from a value claim into a verified fact, renewed monthly. Over time, it becomes the most-read piece of content the platform produces — not because Wasel promotes it, but because people who believe in what Wasel stands for share it as proof that they were right to believe.

08 Boycott-Resilient Positioning

The Core Distinction

WRONG: Boycott-anchored positioning	RIGHT: Fairness-anchored positioning
Reactive, political, temporary. Collapses when emotions cool. Cannot be trademarked — borrowed from someone else's agenda.	Values-based, permanent, owned entirely by Wasel. Applies to every person regardless of their political temperature.
"Boycott Uber. Choose Wasel."	"Choose fairly. Choose Wasel."

The rule: Wasel never says "boycott." Wasel says "choose fairly." One phrase is borrowed from a political moment. The other is owned forever.

The 12-Month Transition Arc

Phase	Months	Brand Focus	Key Message
Catalyst	M1–M4	Acknowledge the moment without owning it. Give people permission to switch without requiring political declaration.	"Finally, an alternative." Message: the fair choice is available now.
Proof	M5–M9	Shift to economics. Real driver income stories. Real rider savings. The platform proves what it promised.	"Here's what changed." Message: Wasel delivered. The numbers say so.
Institution	M10+	Stop talking about the competition entirely. Speak only about what Wasel has built.	"This is what Jordan chose." Message: Wasel is the norm, not the alternative.

What Never Appears in Wasel Materials

- Palestinian or Jordanian flags in brand imagery — co-opts a cause, alienates segments, invites political categorisation
- Direct attacks on named competitors — makes Wasel reactive and smaller, not confident and larger
- "Foreign app" language in advertising — makes the brand's value prop dependent on an external enemy
- Political figures as endorsers — ties the brand to personalities with their own expiry dates
- Boycott hashtags in campaigns — temporary, looks desperate, forfeits brand ownership of its own story

09 Loyalty & Defensibility Systems

For Riders — Switching Costs Built on Habit

Mechanism	Structure	Switching Cost Created
Wasel Wallet	Pre-load credits: JD 20 purchased = JD 22 in platform credit (10% bonus). No subscription required.	Financial: a rider with JD 18 in Wasel Wallet does not switch to Uber for their next trip. Irrational financially.
Wasel Streak	Consecutive months of riding build visible Loyal Rider status. At 3 months: priority pickup. At 6 months: early feature access. At 12 months: quarterly ride credit.	Psychological: loss aversion. Users protect streaks. Streaks become identity signals. Shared in social contexts.
Wasel Go & Pass	Subscription tiers built on non-monetary benefits (priority dispatch, surge protection, cancellations) — no fare discounts that create unit-economics exposure.	Habitual: monthly subscription creates a reason to use Wasel over ad-hoc competitors. Default behaviour.
Corporate integration	Company expense systems process Wasel invoices. Individual employees stop making platform choices.	Institutional: embedded in procurement. Switching requires a corporate decision, not an individual one.

For Drivers — Reputation as a Non-Transferable Asset

A driver's Wasel rating, earnings history, income documentation, insurance relationships, and community standing on the platform are entirely non-portable. A driver with two years on Wasel, a 4.8 rating, and 3,200 completed rides does not restart that on Uber. He walks away from two years of professional identity.

System	Structure	Loyalty Effect
Driver Rating	Public, grows with tenure, earns priority dispatch queue. Top-rated drivers visible to corporate accounts.	Identity-level attachment. Protectable asset. Cannot be recreated elsewhere.
Income Verification Statement	Annual earnings statement issued by Wasel. First official income document many drivers have ever received.	Used for bank loans, rental applications, university admissions. Deep practical loyalty that has nothing to do with the app.
Wasel Driver Community	WhatsApp channel + in-app community: regulatory updates, earnings digests, quarterly meetups for top 100 drivers by earnings.	Social belonging. Drivers recruit from within the community. Word-of-mouth is the dominant driver acquisition channel by Month 6.
Annual Driver Summit	One day per year. 100 top drivers. Real conversations about what works and what doesn't. Wasel leadership present. No corporate agenda.	The most important loyalty event on the calendar. Worth more than any bonus programme. Drivers who attend recruit every driver they know.

10 Competitive Positioning Matrix

Dimension	Uber	Careem	inDrive	Wasel
Revenue model	30% commission	30% commission	Bidding — variable	Flat monthly fee — driver keeps all fares
Driver net income (blended)	JD 60/month net after costs	JD 60/month net after costs	JD 80–120/month (variable)	JD 123–395/month by tier
Jordanian ownership	None	None (Uber-owned)	None (HQ: Miami)	100% Jordanian
LTRC licensed	Yes	Yes	No (unlicensed)	Yes (in application)
Boycott exposure	HIGH — Flytrex investment (Sep 2025)	HIGH — Uber-owned	LOW	None
Brand narrative	Global convenience	Lost "local" identity	Price-based	Fairness-based, permanent
Driver switching cost	Low — drivers resent commission model	Low — drivers resent commission model	Low — no community	High by Month 12 (rating, income docs, community)
Rider subscription tier	Uber One (commission-funded)	None	None	Wasel Go / Pass (perks-based, sustainable unit economics)
Fare pricing	Standard	Standard	Variable (bidding)	5% below standard — competitive acquisition pricing
Corporate adoption suitability	High (established)	High (established)	Low (unlicensed)	High (licensed, invoice billing, Fairness Report)

Wasel's competitive advantage is structural, not cosmetic. The flat-fee model, Jordanian ownership, and LTRC compliance combine to create a positioning that incumbents cannot replicate without destroying their own business model.

11 Go-to-Market Timeline — Brand Milestones

Period	Phase	Brand Priorities	Key Milestones
Pre-Launch (Month 0)	Foundation	Brand identity locked. Driver community seeded. "100% Jordanian" narrative live on social. First 250 driver stories captured.	Brand guidelines finalised. Wasel Driver WhatsApp community active with 250+ members. Teaser campaign live.
Month 1–3	Blitz	Launch campaign: "The Fair Ride." Driver acquisition surge. Rider first-ride promos. University ambassador programme activated at 3 campuses. JD 12K/month rider marketing.	250 drivers onboarded. 2,000+ riders. 3 campus partnerships signed. First Fairness Report published.
Month 4–6	Build	Shift to income proof messaging. Driver Story series producing weekly. Corporate sales active. Wasel Go subscription launched. JD 8K/month rider marketing.	500+ drivers. 14,000+ riders. 5 corporate accounts. Wasel Go adoption at 10% of subscriber base.
Month 7–12	Compound	Boycott narrative deprecated. Wasel speaks only about what it has built. Driver Summit planned. Rider streak programme driving retention. JD 5K/month rider marketing.	1,300+ drivers. 36,000+ riders. 20 corporate accounts. First annual Driver Summit. Month 12: Fairness Report shows net positive driver income vs. Uber/Careem baseline.
Year 2+	Institution	Wasel is the norm, not the alternative. Regional expansion narrative begins (Irbid, Zarqa, Aqaba). Brand language: "The platform Jordan built."	3,000+ drivers. Multi-city. B2B revenue >15% of total. Brand unaided awareness >40% in target demographic.

12 Brand Investment Budget — Year 1

Category	Line Item	Year 1 Budget (JOD)	Notes
Driver Acquisition	Driver referral bonuses (JD 15 per referred driver)	33,360	2,224 new drivers in Y1 model
Driver Acquisition	Digital ads + WhatsApp community management	15,000	Supplementary to referral-led acquisition
Driver Content	Driver Story series production (weekly, 52 episodes)	7,800	JD 150/episode; phone-quality, authentic
Rider Acquisition	Phase 1 (M1–M3): blitz spend	36,000	JD 12,000/month; social, influencers, promos
Rider Acquisition	Phase 2 (M4–M6): build spend	24,000	JD 8,000/month; referral, corporate outreach
Rider Acquisition	Phase 3 (M7–M12): optimise spend	30,000	JD 5,000/month; SEO/ASO, loyalist referral
University Programme	Wasel Campus: 8 ambassadors (2 per campus × 4 campuses initially)	14,400	JD 150/month each × 12 months
University Programme	Campus activation events, signage, student promos	8,000	Orientation weeks, exam season
Corporate Sales	Corporate account sales materials and outreach programme	4,000	Account manager time + materials
Community Events	Neighbourhood sponsorships, local events, grassroots presence	6,000	JD 500/month; high-touch, low-cost
Brand Infrastructure	Brand guidelines, app UX copy, Arabic localisation	5,000	One-time Year 1 cost
Fairness Report	Monthly design and distribution (12 reports)	3,600	JD 300/report; design-only cost
Driver Summit	Annual Driver Summit: venue, logistics, 100 drivers	4,000	End of Year 1
TOTAL YEAR 1 BRAND INVESTMENT		JD 191,160	As % of Y1 total outflows: ~16%

Note: JD 54,000 of the rider marketing spend is incremental vs. the base financial model (original: JD 36,000 flat). The incremental JD 54,000 is fully offset by rider subscription revenue of approximately JD 130,000 in Year 1, netting a positive contribution of ~JD 76,000.

13 KPIs & Success Metrics

Brand strategy that cannot be measured cannot be defended. The following metrics are tracked monthly, reported in the Fairness Report, and reviewed quarterly with investors.

Brand Health Metrics

Metric	Month 3 Target	Month 6 Target	Month 12 Target	Measurement Method
Unaided brand awareness (Amman, 18–45)	8%	18%	35%	Monthly online panel survey (n=200)
Brand association: "fair"	45% of aware respondents	60%	70%	Brand tracker survey
Brand association: "reliable"	30%	50%	65%	Brand tracker survey
Net Promoter Score — Drivers	40+	50+	60+	Monthly in-app survey
Net Promoter Score — Riders	30+	42+	55+	Monthly in-app survey
Fairness Report shares (organic)	200/month	500/month	1,200/month	Social analytics

Acquisition & Retention Metrics

Metric	Month 3	Month 6	Month 12	Notes
Active drivers (EoM)	300	509	1,300+	Per revised 28% MoM growth model
Driver CAC (fully loaded)	JD 45	JD 40	JD 35	Declining as referral % increases
Driver referral rate	25%	38%	50%+	Target: majority of new drivers via referral by M12
M0 → M1 retention	75%	78%	80%	Improved by driver earnings fix (JD 123 net, not JD 20)
Rider base (EoM)	8,900	17,500	36,000+	Per Rider Economics model
Rider monthly retention rate	80%	85%	88%	Improved by Wasel Wallet and streak mechanics
Wasel Go/Pass subscriber rate	8%	12%	15%	Of total active rider base
Corporate accounts active	3	10	20	Target sector: healthcare, media, banking, NGOs
Rider CAC (blended)	JD 6.85	JD 5.50	JD 4.20	Declining as campus + referral channels mature

Financial Brand Metrics

Metric	Year 1	Year 2 Target	Significance
Rider subscription revenue	~JD 130,000	~JD 400,000+	Second revenue pillar; validates dual-sided model
Brand-driven CAC reduction vs. paid-only model	25–35%	35–45%	Community engine measurably reducing cost of growth
Corporate account revenue	JD 15,000+	JD 80,000+	Institutional adoption = highest-quality revenue
Driver LTV / CAC ratio	13.9x (base)	14.5x	Improving as churn falls due to earnings and community

The brand thesis in one paragraph

Wasel wins Jordan not by being loudest about being Jordanian, but by being the only platform that structurally earns the right to call itself fair. That distinction does not require a boycott to survive. It does not require a political moment to sustain it. It requires only that drivers continue to earn more than they did yesterday, that riders continue to trust what they are told, and that the Fairness Report continues to show numbers that Uber and Careem would never publish. That is the brand. Build it that way and it will outlast every competitor, every campaign, and every news cycle.
