BRAND STRATEGY

Complete 7-Part Framework

"To move Jordan forward — fairly."

Jordan's first subscription-based ride-hailing platform
Drivers keep 100% of every fare · Flat monthly fee · Built for Jordan

---

CONFIDENTIAL · Version 2.0 · February 2026

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Wasel is Jordan's first subscription-based ride-hailing platform. Where Uber and Careem extract 30% of every fare a driver earns — every ride, every month, forever — Wasel charges a flat monthly fee of JD 20–55 and lets the driver keep 100% of their earnings. The platform earns whether a driver completes 5 rides or 50. The driver keeps the rest.

This brand strategy document is designed to accomplish three things simultaneously: recruit drivers away from commission-extraction through a message rooted in dignity and economics; convert riders through value alignment rather than guilt; and build the institutional trust required for corporate adoption and long-term defensibility.

> "The brand thesis: Wasel wins not by shouting loudest about being Jordanian, but by being the only platform that structurally earns the right to call itself fair. That distinction is permanent. The boycott is a catalyst. The economics are the argument."

The strategy is built on seven interlocking pillars:

- Phase 1 — Brand Truth: An enduring mission rooted in structural fairness, not political moment
- Phase 2 — Audience Architecture: Dual-sided personas for drivers and riders with distinct emotional logic
- Phase 3 — Cultural Context: A positioning that exploits the boycott window while surviving beyond it
- Phase 4 — Messaging Framework: Language that lands in Jordanian vernacular — real numbers, not marketing fluff
- Phase 5 — Visual Language: A visual identity that feels like a document, not a sales page
- Phase 6 — Channel Strategy: WhatsApp-first, offline-grounded, with digital amplification
- Phase 7 — Measurement Framework: 25 KPIs across 5 categories, anchored to a Monthly Fairness Report

01 BRAND TRUTH

The foundation — who Wasel authentically is before anything else

The Problem Wasel Exists to Solve

Jordan's ride-hailing market is dominated by two foreign operators with identical business models: extract 30% of every fare. At a blended monthly fare revenue of JD 585 per driver, that is JD 175 extracted monthly — JD 2,100 annually per driver. Across 11,600 licensed vehicles, the commission economy removes approximately JD 24.4 million from Jordanian driver incomes every year and routes it to overseas shareholders.

This is not an emotional framing. It is the arithmetic of the commission model applied to publicly available market data. Wasel's entire brand proposition begins here — at the numbers, before the story.

What Would Be Lost If Wasel Disappeared Tomorrow

Jordan's drivers would return to having no economically fair platform. The category would remain owned by multinationals extracting 30% indefinitely. There would be no Jordanian-owned alternative with structural fairness baked into the business model — and no Monthly Fairness Report to hold the market accountable. The absence of Wasel is the status quo: extraction as default.

What Wasel Believes That Competitors Don't

- A driver's labour is worth 100% of what it earns, not 70%.
- Transparency is not a risk — it is a retention strategy. Publishing your numbers builds more loyalty than any loyalty programme.
- The platform that serves the driver better ultimately serves the rider better. These interests are aligned, not opposed.
- A flat fee is not just a pricing model — it is a statement about power. Who captures the value of growth matters.

The Origin: Why Wasel Was Created

Three structural conditions converged to make this the right moment. First, Uber's September 2025 investment in Israeli drone company Flytrex created a genuine emotional breaking point among Jordanian drivers and riders — a 1.25× acquisition efficiency multiplier that must be captured within a 12–18 month window. Second, no existing Jordanian platform uses a subscription model: every competitor takes commission, meaning every driver is financially worse off every month. Third, Jordan's ride-hailing market has no dominant local brand. The category is owned by multinationals. Wasel can own the 'Jordanian' identity permanently if it moves fast and executes with integrity.

Non-Negotiable Values

- Fairness: Structural, not rhetorical. Every product decision is tested against it.
- Transparency: Numbers published monthly. Revenue, costs, driver earnings — all on record.
- Dignity: The word 'partner' is banned. Drivers are not partners — they are Wasel. The distinction matters.
- Accountability: The platform's reputation is the drivers' reputation. They rise or fall together.
- Rootedness: Jordanian-owned, Jordanian-operated, Jordanian-staffed. Not a slogan — a verifiable fact.

BRAND TRUTH STATEMENT

Wasel exists because the commission model is structurally unfair to every driver who works within it. We believe a platform that earns from the success of its drivers — not from extracting a percentage of their labour — will always outperform one that doesn't. Our mission is simple and permanent: to move Jordan forward, fairly. That means building a platform where drivers earn more, riders pay less, and the economics are published for everyone to see.

02 AUDIENCE ARCHITECTURE

Who Wasel serves — not demographics, but motivations

Driver Personas

Drivers are everything. You cannot have riders without dispatch coverage. Every JD and every hour in the first three months should be weighted toward driver acquisition.

Hassan — The Full-Time Professional

Core Tier Driver · JD 35/mo · 9 trips/day

Core Motivation	Predictable income, professional recognition, financial stability for his family
Current Belief	Uber is the only serious platform — it's not fair but it's reliable. There's no real alternative.
Tension Point	He's losing JD 175/month in commission and knows it. He doesn't switch because he fears income gap during transition.
Success State	On Wasel, earning JD 203/month more than before. His Mu'assis badge is displayed on his dashboard. His wife knows the subscription model is solid.
Switch Trigger	Seeing a trusted colleague's actual earnings screen on Wasel. Not marketing — proof from a known face.

Khalil — The Taxi Office Driver

Starter Tier · JD 20/mo · Connected via office manager

Core Motivation	Keep his community ties while improving his economic situation
Current Belief	New apps don't last in Jordan. He's been through two that collapsed. He needs institutional trust before he commits.
Tension Point	His office manager is the gatekeeper. Without the manager's endorsement, Khalil won't move.
Success State	His office manager has a Wasel Partnership Plaque on the wall. Ten of his colleagues are already on the platform. He joins because it's now the sensible thing, not the risky thing.
Switch Trigger	His office manager endorsing Wasel in person. The Plaque. The printed earnings comparison sheet with real JD numbers.

Mohammed — The Supplemental Driver

Starter Tier · JD 20/mo · Evening/weekend driver

Core Motivation	A second income stream that fits around his primary job without financial risk
Current Belief	Apps take too much. If I'm only doing 20 rides a month it's not worth starting another platform.
Tension Point	The subscription model confuses him — he's used to per-ride commission. He needs to see a break-even calculator.
Success State	He's doing 6 trips/day on Wasel Starter. At JD 2.37/trip × 6 trips × 26 days = JD 370 gross, minus JD 20 sub and JD 350 costs = still positive. He stays.
Switch Trigger	The earnings calculator in the landing page. Concrete JD numbers, not percentages.

Rider Personas

Do not launch rider acquisition until 60+ active drivers are verified in the pilot zone. Premature demand with inadequate supply destroys early adopters — the highest-trust users you need most.

Nour — The University Student

Wasel Go · JD 5/mo · High frequency, price-sensitive

Core Motivation	Safe, affordable, reliable transport between campus and home. Doesn't own a car.
Current Belief	Ride-hailing is expensive. She uses it when she must. She'd use it more if it were cheaper.
Tension Point	She doesn't trust new apps with her personal safety. The first experience has to be perfect.
Success State	Wasel Go at JD 5/month gives her 10% off every ride. Live trip sharing means her mother knows where she is at all times. She becomes a campus connector with 30 invite cards.
Switch Trigger	The live trip sharing feature shown to her mother first. The safety UI — driver photo, plate, SOS — visible before booking. Campus connector with personal referral code.

Rima — The Daily Commuter

Wasel Pass · JD 10/mo · Daily user, values consistency

Core Motivation	The same reliable driver experience every day, predictable cost, no surge pricing stress.
Current Belief	Uber is the default. Not because it's good — because it's there.
Tension Point	She knows Uber is expensive but switching feels like effort. The JD 10 Wasel Pass has to feel worth it on day one.
Success State	18% off daily rides, no surge pricing, unlimited cancellations. Her monthly transport cost drops by JD 25. She stops checking Uber.
Switch Trigger	The 'no surge pricing' benefit. The economics of 12 rides to break even at JD 2.37/ride. The Jordan-owned story — once, briefly.

Ahmad's Company — Corporate Account

B2B · Invoice billing · 20+ employees

Core Motivation	Predictable monthly transport cost for employees. No reimbursement admin.
Current Belief	Only established platforms are trusted for corporate use. New apps are a risk to employee safety.
Tension Point	The procurement process is long. One Wasel corporate champion inside the company can accelerate it.
Success State	Monthly invoice. Priority dispatch for corporate rides. Finance team processes Wasel payments monthly — individual employees stop making switching decisions.
Switch Trigger	A reference from another corporate client. The Wasel Fairness Report showing platform stability and transparency.

Who Is Explicitly NOT the Target

- GCC-based users — commission models are tolerable at higher wage levels; structural pain is weaker
- Tourists and occasional visitors — they default to Uber due to global brand familiarity
- Premium luxury ride seekers — Wasel's positioning is fairness and value, not prestige
- Drivers who are satisfied with Uber/Careem — do not waste acquisition spend on confirmed loyalists
- Riders whose primary decision driver is app UX polish — the Wasel proposition is economic, not aesthetic

03 CULTURAL CONTEXT & POSITIONING

Where the brand sits in culture, competition, and the white space it must own

What Makes Wasel Urgently Relevant Now

Three forces have converged to create a launch window that will not reopen:

- 1. The Boycott Catalyst: Uber's September 2025 investment in Israeli drone company Flytrex created a documented consumer backlash across Jordan, amplified by family WhatsApp networks, mosque communities, and Jordanian Twitter/X. The International Alliance of App-Based Transport Workers (100,000+ drivers across 20 countries) had already pledged solidarity boycotts. The Careem reputational contagion is complete — it is 100% Uber-owned.
- 2. The Economic Gap: A Jordanian driver doing 9 trips/day on Uber keeps JD 12.70 after 30% commission. The same driver on Wasel keeps JD 21.33 minus JD 20/month subscription — a net difference of JD 248/month. This number sells itself. It does not require political positioning.
- 3. The Identity Vacuum: Careem's 'local Arab brand' perception died with the Uber acquisition. No Jordanian-owned platform has claimed the national identity of the ride-hailing category. That position is permanently available for approximately 18 months before a well-funded competitor occupies it.

The Competitive Landscape

Platform	Model	Jordan Position	Wasel Threat Level
Uber	30% commission	~60% market share; dominant, post-boycott vulnerable	HIGH — primary displacement target
Careem	30% commission (Uber-owned)	~40% market share; 'local' perception destroyed	HIGH — most vulnerable to Wasel's positioning
Jeeny	Commission-based	Minimal market impact; limited driver/rider base	LOW — not a strategic threat
Petra Ride	Commission-based	Niche; no meaningful market penetration	LOW — monitor only
LTRC-Licensed Taxis	Meter-based	Declining; older demographic loyalty	MEDIUM — driver recruitment opportunity

Category Conventions to Challenge

- Convention — 'Apps are for young people': Challenge: Build a WhatsApp-first flow completable by a 55-year-old taxi driver in 90 seconds
- Convention — 'Digital payment first': Challenge: Launch with 65% cash-compatible infrastructure from Day 1

- Convention — 'Growth through advertising': Challenge: Grow through taxi office managers and fuel station ambassadors — word of mouth at the node level
- Convention — 'Brand as polish': Challenge: Brand as document — transparency reports, real numbers, real faces
- Convention — 'Loyalty through points': Challenge: Loyalty through non-transferable professional identity — driver ratings, Mu'assis badges, earnings history

Positioning Statement

POSITIONING STATEMENT

For Jordan's ride-hailing drivers and riders who are tired of being extracted from by foreign platforms, Wasel is the only fully Jordanian-owned platform that charges a flat subscription fee and lets drivers keep 100% of every fare. Unlike Uber and Careem, whose commission model removes JD 24.4 million from Jordanian driver incomes annually, Wasel's economics are structurally fair — and we publish the numbers every month to prove it.

The Rule: Wasel never says 'boycott.' Wasel says 'choose fairly.' One phrase is borrowed from a political moment. The other is owned forever.

The White Space Wasel Must Own

'Structural fairness' as a permanent positioning. Not 'the Jordanian app' (a temporary political identity) and not 'the cheap app' (a race to the bottom). The platform that earns the right to call itself fair — because its economics, its transparency, and its community treatment prove it — month after month, year after year, regardless of what happens in regional politics.

04 MESSAGING FRAMEWORK

Translating strategy into the exact language that moves drivers and riders

The One Thing People Must Remember

CORE MESSAGE

"We exist to make mobility fair for every Jordanian — the one who drives, and the one who rides."

Driver Messaging — The Central Emotional Truth

The indignity of the commission model is not primarily financial — it is moral. In Jordanian culture, a man's labour is his dignity. Taking 30% of a man's work every single day, with no ceiling and no reciprocity, is a moral offence that the market has normalised. Wasel names this — not by shouting, but by offering the alternative and letting the arithmetic speak.

Driver-Facing Proof Points:

- The Number: At 9 trips/day, a Core driver saves JD 143/month vs. Uber/Careem. Over 12 months: JD 1,716 stays in your pocket.
- The Founding Badge: The first 500 drivers are Mu'assisun — founders. That number is permanent, visible to every rider, and non-transferable.
- The Insurance: Third-party liability included for all tiers. Roadside assistance for Core+. Comprehensive subsidy for Pro. You don't lose these if you leave a commission platform — you never had them.
- The Fairness Report: Every month, Wasel publishes what it earned, what it spent, and what every driver earned. No competitor can match this because their numbers would indict them.
- The Referral: Refer 1 verified driver = 1 free subscription month. Refer 5+ = 6 free months + a Wasel jacket + your name in the Fairness Report.

Rider Messaging — The Central Emotional Truth

Most Jordanian riders will not boycott Uber out of conviction alone — they will switch if switching feels smart, easy, and aligned with who they want to be. Guilt is not a loyalty engine. Pride is. The rider's choice should feel like the intelligent option that also happens to be the decent one.

Rider-Facing Proof Points:

- Fares 5% below market: JD 2.37/trip vs. ~JD 2.50 on Uber/Careem. You save without thinking about it.
- No surge pricing on Wasel Pass: Your airport run at 6am costs the same as your afternoon coffee trip.

- Live trip sharing: One tap sends a live location link to any contact via WhatsApp. Every mother in Jordan will understand this immediately.
- Wasel Go breaks even at 21 rides: JD 5/month ÷ JD 0.237 savings per ride = 21 rides to break even. For a regular commuter, that's week two.
- The boycott, said once: Unlike platforms with overseas ownership, Wasel is 100% Jordanian-owned. Your money stays in Jordan and goes directly to the driver. That's it. We say it once. Then we let the product prove it.

Tone of Voice

Tone Attribute	What It Means in Practice
Direct	Real numbers, short sentences. 'Driver earning JD 585 keeps JD 585.' Not 'maximize your income potential'.
Jordanian	احنا not نحن. Vernacular, not formal MSA. Not Gulf Arabic. Written the way people speak in Amman.
Earned confidence	No superlatives. No 'best' or 'first'. Let the arithmetic be the claim.
Dry wit, used sparingly	One well-placed joke per campaign. Jordanian humour rewards the attentive. Never deploy it under pressure.
Peer, not brand	Wasel speaks as someone who knows the situation from the inside — not a corporation explaining it from outside.

Language Do's and Don'ts

✓ DO USE	✗ NEVER USE
✓ Real JD amounts, not percentages	✗ 'Partner' (for drivers — ever)
✓ Ahmad, Nour, Hassan — real names in examples	✗ Boycott, occupation, political hashtags
✓ احنا, مش, هاد حقك	✗ Gulf Arabic or formal MSA in consumer copy
✓ The word 'flat fee'	✗ 'Commission-free' — we charge a fee, not zero
✓ 'Jordanian-owned' — stated once, then dropped	✗ Any competitor's name in ads
✓ 'Your earnings. Your platform.'	✗ 'World-class', 'best-in-class', 'industry-leading'

05 VISUAL LANGUAGE PRINCIPLES

The principles — not the executions — for how Wasel looks and feels

What People Should Feel When They See the Brand

- Trusted — like a government form that actually works
- Capable — like a man who doesn't need to announce he's competent
- Jordanian — but not in a flag-waving way; in the way a neighbourhood barbershop feels Jordanian
- Substantive — like something was thought about before being made
- Honest — like the numbers haven't been rounded for comfort

Typography Philosophy

Typography carries most of Wasel's brand personality. The brand speaks in type more than imagery.

- Primary: A humanist sans-serif with Arabic companion (e.g. Almarai + Inter, or Tajawal + Inter). The Arabic script must feel contemporary, not traditional — this is not a heritage brand.
- Numbers are the hero typeface. JD 248. Month 12. 9 trips/day. When in doubt, make the number larger.
- Avoid decorative type at all costs. No calligraphy. No ornamental Arabic scripts. Wasel's identity is built on readability, not aesthetics.
- Weight hierarchy: Bold for the claim, Regular for the proof, Light for the context. Never more than three weights in one composition.

Color Meaning and Intent

- Deep Navy (#1F4E79): Primary — Authority, trust, structure. The colour of a document that matters.
- Wasel Blue (#2E86C1): Secondary — Clarity, movement, openness. Used for interactive elements and highlights.
- Jordanian Earth (#E67E22): Accent — Warmth, grounding, local resonance. Used sparingly for emphasis.
- Clean White (#FFFFFF): Backgrounds — Space, honesty, nothing to hide.
- Near-Black (#2C2C2C): Body text — Readable, not harsh. Slightly warmer than pure black.
- Success Green (#1E8B4C): Positive indicators only — earnings, confirmations, completed trips.
- Alert Red (#C0392B): For honest bad news only — not used decoratively. Wasel respects the user's time.

Photography and Illustration Approach

- Real drivers, real faces, real cars — never stock photography. The Mu'assis #1 badge photographed on a real person's dashboard is worth more than any campaign image.
- Urban Amman as backdrop — the Fourth Circle, University Street, Ras Al Ain. Not generic 'Middle East' imagery.
- Earnings screens are content — a driver's WhatsApp earnings screenshot is a brand asset.
- No hero shots or dramatic lighting. The aesthetic is documentary, not advertising.
- Illustration, if used, is functional — diagrams, earnings calculators, infographics. Not decorative.

What the Brand Must Never Look Like

- ✗ A corporate app (no gradients, rounded buttons, soft-glow UI)
- ✗ A political movement (no flag imagery, raised fists, protest aesthetics)
- ✗ A luxury service (no dark backgrounds, gold accents, serif elegance)
- ✗ A generic startup (no 'friendly' illustrations, pastel palettes, chat bubble icons)
- ✗ An international brand translated into Arabic (everything must originate in Arabic and Jordanian context)

06 CHANNEL STRATEGY

Where and how Wasel shows up — WhatsApp-first, offline-grounded, digitally amplified

The WhatsApp-First Principle

Email does not exist as a functional channel for Jordanian driver communication. WhatsApp is not a channel — it is the substrate on which Jordanian digital life runs. Every sign-up flow, every driver communication, every referral mechanic must be completable entirely within WhatsApp.

Channel Priority Matrix

#	Channel	Role	Execution	Cadence	Tone
1	Offline — Fuel Stations	Driver Acquisition	Deploy a Wasel field ambassador (onboarded driver) at peak hours 7–9am, 4–7pm. Zero cash cost if ambassador is already onboarded.	Daily during P1-P2	Peer-to-peer, demonstrative
2	WhatsApp Groups	Driver Acquisition + Retention	Seed questions through trusted driver members. Create 'Mu'assisun Wasel' — invite-only, membership by driver referral only.	Weekly cadence, not daily	Peer-to-peer, conversational
3	Taxi Office Network	Driver Acquisition (High-Yield)	Recruit office managers not drivers. One converted manager = 10–25 drivers. Plaque + referral cards + monthly earnings report.	Monthly in-person visit	Consultative, relationship
4	Facebook Groups	Driver Awareness + Amplification	Target: 'سائقو أوبر الأردن' (15K+ members). Post earnings calculators and regulatory updates — never ads. Paid lookalike audiences from waitlist only.	3× per week organic	Educational, peer
5	University Campuses	Rider Acquisition	One connector student per	Monthly per campus	Social, referral

			campus with 30 invite cards. Canteen QR banners. Student Wasel Go — 3 months free.
6	TikTok	Organic reach, driver stories	Unscripted dashboard-filmed earnings videos. One viral video can replace JD 5,000 of paid acquisition. Never produce content that looks produced.	Weekly — driver-generated	Documentary, authentic
7	Instagram / Reels	Rider acquisition + brand	Visual storytelling of 'The Fair Ride' narrative. Driver story series. Earnings comparisons. Boycott mentioned once.	3–4× per week	Visual, value-forward
8	Corporate Direct Outreach	B2B acquisition	Target HR and finance decision-makers at medium-large Amman companies. Monthly billing + Priority dispatch as pitch.	Monthly account calls	Professional, data-driven
9	Monthly Fairness Report	Trust, retention, earned media	Public one-page document: rides, driver earnings, Wasel revenue, Jordan reinvestment. Distributed to driver communities, corporate clients, press.	Monthly — non-negotiable	Transparent, factual

Owned vs. Earned vs. Paid Balance

Year 1 target allocation: 60% offline/earned · 25% owned digital · 15% paid digital

- Offline/earned is the engine — ambassador networks, taxi office relationships, WhatsApp organic, driver story videos
- Owned digital amplifies — landing page, Fairness Report, driver community group, corporate collateral
- Paid digital is targeted and late — Facebook lookalike ads to existing waitlist numbers only; no broad awareness spend in P1
- Boycott efficiency multiplier (1.25×) applies to all paid channels — model conservatively at this rate only

Channels Wasel Must Deprioritize or Avoid

- ✗ LinkedIn — irrelevant to drivers; corporate rider pitch happens through direct outreach, not LinkedIn ads
- ✗ Twitter/X — too volatile for brand messaging in current geopolitical context; monitor only
- ✗ Outdoor advertising (billboards, bus wraps) in Phase 1 — too broad; spend efficiency low before brand is established
- ✗ Influencer marketing — Jordanian authenticity culture rewards the real over the sponsored; no influencer can outperform a real driver earnings video
- ✗ Email marketing — non-functional for the primary acquisition demographic

07 MEASUREMENT FRAMEWORK

What success looks like — 25 KPIs across 5 categories, anchored to the Monthly Fairness Report

North Star Metric

Active Drivers Paying Full Tier Pricing (M2+ Cohort)

Rationale: This single metric validates the entire model. An active M2+ driver proves: (1) acquisition succeeded, (2) onboarding funnel worked, (3) economics are viable, (4) platform has supply to serve riders. Every other metric is a leading indicator of this one.

Break-even threshold: 1,200 active M2+ drivers → platform reaches monthly profitability.

What We Will NOT Measure (To Stay Focused)

- ✗ Social media follower count — vanity metric; Wasel's growth is offline and word-of-mouth
- ✗ App store rankings — irrelevant until P3; not a driver acquisition channel
- ✗ Media coverage volume — quality over quantity; one Fairness Report share in a driver WhatsApp group outperforms a press mention
- ✗ Gross Merchandise Value (GMV) — Wasel earns flat subscription, not percentage of GMV; optimising for GMV is the wrong incentive
- ✗ Global benchmarks — Jordan-specific unit economics are what matter; Western CAC benchmarks are actively misleading

The Monthly Fairness Report — A Brand Asset, Not a Compliance Document

Every month, Wasel publishes a one-page public document containing: total rides completed, total driver earnings on platform, Wasel's revenue, what was reinvested in Jordan (salaries, vendors, technology), and one driver story with real income numbers. Available on the website, shared in driver communities, distributed to corporate clients.

No competitor can match this because their numbers would indict them.

The Fairness Report transforms Wasel's transparency from a value claim into a verified fact, renewed monthly. Over time, it becomes the most-read content the platform produces — not because Wasel promotes it, but because people who believe in what Wasel stands for share it as proof that they were right to believe.
